

the piercing            by ted slater

heavy hammered iron, razor-rough burr, driven by a purpose.

with a shriek, becoming one with flesh and vein and gristly tendon.

splitting nerves like frayed snapped saplings and coming to rest,

snug and bathed,

in a bed of cedar.